GOP Leaders Say House To Pass Tax Cut Easily

WASHINGTON, March 23—GOP leaders predict today that the House will pass by an overwhelming vote tomorrow the Senate-approved bill to cut taxes four billion $724,000,000 a year.

This will complete final enactment and send the bill to the White House. President Truman is said to be determined to veto the measure despite the whopping 78 to 11 majority by which the Senate approved the tax cut.

House Speaker Martin, commenting on the Senate vote, said: "It indicates that the bill will become law without any doubt at all. We can pass it over the President's veto without any question."

"It is gratifying to see nearly everybody now recognizing the demand for a tax cut. That demand springs from the fact that, because of high prices, the ordinary people have got to have more money. Incentive also must be provided for business to expand and keep production going."

THE SENATE will send the tax bill to the House today. GOP leaders plan to make a perfunctory move to take it up at once by unanimous consent and pass it.

Truman Blamed For Red Moves

ALBANY, N. Y., March 23—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today blamed what he described as the "vacillating and inadequate" policies of the Truman administration for Russia's expansionist program.

The New York executive said that the President ought to tell the American people "the whole story of the extent of the international situation."

The passing mark will be 3.2 and honors will be 90-proof. And fathers are not supposed to help with the homework.

WASHINGTON, March 23—Sen. Lister Hill, of Alabama, left the camp of President Truman today and joined the rapidly growing revolt of Dixie Democrats to oppose the President's nomination.

WASHINGTON, March 23—The House opened debate today on the $6.25 billion Europe and China recovery program with an appeal by a Republican leader for swift approval as the American answer to "the menace now confronting mankind."

Rep. Eaton, (R) N. J., chairman of the House foreign affairs committee, declared that "no sacrifice, no effort is too great for America nor for every other freedom-minded and freedom-loving people to assume" to halt Soviet domination.

In grim, pointed words, Eaton stated:

"This is the issue which makes necessary the legislation we are now considering. Is the new world civilization to enslave slavery in every land with Russia as its instrument of control or is the new world civilization to enslave freedom in every land with America as its leader and its champion."

"This legislation is an announcement to the world of our choice. Once our choice is made, we must go on until victory is won for ourselves and all mankind."

U. S. Fact-Finding Panel Rejected By Lewis, UMW Union

President Expected To Secure Another Court Injunction

WASHINGTON, March 23—The soft coal strike was turned over to President Truman today for action that may bring another court injunction against John L. Lewis.

Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching went to the White House within 10 minutes after Lewis flatly rejected the government's proposal for ending the strike and submitting the miners' pension dispute to a fact-finding board.

Lewis turned down the government peace plan about a half hour before the noon deadline for its acceptance or rejection. His action followed a conference at UMW headquarters between the mine chief and his top aides.

At the same time, Sen. Ball, (R) Minn., chairman of the joint congressional labor committee, called on President Truman to appoint a board of inquiry on the strike.

BALL SAID after a committee meeting:

"Personally, I think the situation certainly warrants it. That's what the provision is in the (Taft-Hartley) act for."

Ball said the committee was going to stand by for the time being, but added:

"If there is no direct action toward settlement of the dispute in the fairly near future, the committee will meet again to decide what it will do. If no move is taken downtown (the White House) we may do something."

He said the committee could recommend legislation to deal with the strike legislation or could hold public hearings and "get the whole thing out on the table in terms of facts instead of contentions."

Lewis had been expected to turn down the government peace plan. His rejection was set forth in a letter to Ching, who drafted the proposal. The letter was signed by John Owens, UMW secretary treasurer; John T. Jones, head of the UMW Maryland district, and W. A. Boyle, president of the union's Montana district.

This trio of union officials attended the government sponsored conference at which Ching's plan was submitted. Their letter said:

"WE ADVISE you further in relation to your grotesque offer of yesterday."

"The United Mine Workers of America consider that the offer was made to aid the coal operators, who have dishonored their word."

Wallace To Aid GOP Victory

TRENTON, N. J., March 23—Dr. George Gallup, founder of the American Institute of Public Opinion, predicted that a Republican would be elected President next November if Henry A. Wallace remains in the race.

Gallup said that Wallace will take 4,500,000 votes from President Truman in the industrial states. Gallup said that if war "breaks out in the meantime," the outlook could be changed.

Chiefs Staff Given Call

Truman To Talk Defense Funds

WASHINGTON, March 23—President Truman today summoned the joint chiefs of staff to a late afternoon conference at the White House for discussion of immediate financial needs of the armed services.

White House spokesmen said the President is eager to iron out, as quickly as possible, the matter of allocation of defense funds to the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

Observers noted that it was unusual for such a meeting to be called by the chief executive. Ordinarily, Secretary of Defense Forrestal handles such affairs.

However, the White House said the meeting with Mr. Truman was arranged for continuation "at the presidential level" of the recent discussions between the joint chiefs at Key West, Fla.

THE EXTRAORDINARY nature of the conference in the executive mansion underscored the gravity with which the administration views the international situation.

The probability that Congress will speedily comply with the President's request for a return to the draft is expected to be discussed.

Congressional demands for a greatly accelerated war plane construction program also are expected to enter into the discussion.

Chances For Temporary Draft Grow In Congress

WASHINGTON, March 23—Another official warning that the nation's security is threatened by the growing crisis in Europe boosted the chances today of temporary draft legislation.

The warning was given behind closed doors by Secretary of State Marshall, Defense Secretary Forrestal and Army

Secretary Royall. All three told the Senate armed services committee that both the draft and the Universal Military Training are "absolutely necessary."

One prominent GOP senator who favors UMT said the strong case put for the draft now might kill the chances of passing the long-range training program.

UMT drew a strong endorsement today, however, from the United States Chamber of Commerce. In a statement prepared for the Senate committee, Clem D. Johnston, of Roanoke, Va., put the Chamber on record as opposing the "lure of false security."

SEN. GURNEY, (R) S. D., committee chairman, said he feels that the 10 out of 13 committeemen who heard the cabinet trio left the meeting feeling that "it is absolutely necessary to have quick passage of both measures."

Sen. Bridges, (R) N. H., Senate appropriations chairman, said he was "more impressed" by the conference with the secretaries than he has been in any previous meeting with the security chiefs.

Bridges and other senators said they are "satisfied" with the picture presented by the cabinet officers. Gurney reported that the senators were (Continued on Page Two)

British Blast Aids Chile In UN Czech Probe

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., March 23—Britain's outspoken denunciation of Russian expansion is expected to give new impetus today to the United Nations' efforts to probe the Czechoslovakian question.

When the Security Council sits late today, the United States and France will give strong support to Sir Alexander Cadogan's forthright condemnation of Soviet tactics.

The general opinion at Lake Success is that the British delegate's statement yesterday gave the Chilean complaint about Russian aggression a much-needed "shot-in-the-arm."

Cadogan's citing of chapter and verse in his detailed account of Soviet expansion caught Russian Delegate Andrei Gromyko by complete surprise.

HIS CONDEMNATION of Soviet policy is regarded as the first major move by one of the Western Powers toward blowing the lid off the smoldering East-West controversy.

The Chileans—acting in behalf of Jan Papanek, dismissed Czech created a threat to peace by aiding the Communist minority in Czechoslovakia.

Papanek, who sat the Security Council table yesterday, presented a convincing case but gave only circumstantial evidence that the Soviets were guilty of aggression.

Cadogan bolstered the charges by citing the grab of Balkan countries through Communist minorities guided and controlled by the Moscow regime.

Warships Need A-Bombs, Claim

WASHINGTON, March 23—Rep. A. L. Miller, (R) Neb., today prepared to ask the House to equip U. S. warships in the Mediterranean with atom bombs if they have not already been provided.

Despite official denials from the Navy, Miller maintained his belief that the United States has A-bombs in the Mediterranean "prepared for action."

He said he will speak "off the cuff" to the House at noon. He added:

"If we are not prepared, we ought to be and some one is derelict in their duty."

Parking Meters Reported Filled As Drive Starts

Although the exact number of tickets handed out by the Circleville police department has not been revealed, officials in that department said Tuesday they had "excellent results" with the new regulation, only five Pickaway County car owners failing to report for their $1 fine.

Police Chief William F. McCrady said that while the record for the first day was "good," he wished to warn those who did not come in Monday that their names were known, and that unless they settled up within the 24 hour period allotted them, they would face fines of from $1 to $50.

"The coin cans were filled to overflowing for the first time since they were installed," he said.

U.S. Blamed For Bloodshed In Holy Land

JERUSALEM, March 23—United States reversal of its position on partition of Palestine was blamed by a spokesman of the Jewish Agency today for increased bloodshed in the Holy Land.

The statement followed a call to members of the General Zionist Council, supreme authority of Zionism, to meet in extraordinary session in Palestine next April 4 to consider future policy.

Thaws Feeding Flooding Rivers In 11-State Area

By International News Service

Flash floods and rain-swollen rivers and streams, fed by Spring thaws, poured over rich bottom lands and towns in an 11-state area today from North Dakota southward along the Mississippi river and eastward to New York.

Hundreds of families already have been forced to flee from their homes and thousands of others were warned to be ready to leave on instant notice in several of the flood-threatened areas.

Two deaths have been attributed to the floods. A 4-year-old girl was drowned at Midland, Mich., and a bride of 18 died when she fell from a raft at Stone Park, Ill.

Other states affected by the flood waters are New York, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Ohio, Iowa, Missouri and North Dakota.

HEAVY RAINS brought flood damage to Ohio. No more heavy rain was forecast for today, however. A torrential downpour caused an estimated $1,000,000 damage to Cleveland including $60,000 damage to the city's zoo.

The most dangerous flood area was reported developing today at Quincy, Ill., where volunteers worked throughout the night piling sandbags along a 300-foot section of the South Quincy levee on the Mississippi river.

The Mississippi river at Quincy, a town of more than 40,000 population, was seven feet above flood stage, and it was feared the river might break through at any moment and inundate about 6,000 acres of rich wheatland.

Among the hard hit sections of the flood area were New York state and Pennsylvania. Rising waters drove hundreds of families from their homes in the Susquehanna Valley. The Chenango river also went over its banks. At least three counties were affected by the floods.

The Red Cross reported that 265 families were forced to evacuate their homes in the Birmingham, N. Y., area, and the

Special Children's Movie Show To Be Set Up By Theatre Here

A six-week trial of a special children's matinee is to be launched soon in Circleville.

Agreement to stage such a movie program was reached Monday night at a meeting of Circleville Movie Council and officials of Chakeres Theatres.

Representing the theatre group were Frank Collins, general manager of Chakeres Theatres; Harold Watt, manager of the local Grand theatre and Miss Marie Wilkin, manager of the Cliftona theatre.

The movie council, which was formed several weeks ago, presented its case to the theatre people and in return heard suggestions from Chakeres Theatres, operators of two of the three local movie houses. Management of the Circle theatre was not represented at the meeting.

According to council officials, the six-week trial period will provide a Saturday afternoon matinee in the Cliftona theatre.

The show, to be set up especially for children, will be run at 2 p. m. The program is to include a double feature of interest to children and cartoons.

The program probably will include a western movie and one other from such classics as "Elephant Boy," "Tom Sawyer," and Dickens stories.

The council voted in favor of western-type movies, saying they believed this type show was not detrimental to juveniles.

The Grand theatre, not involved in the agreement, will continue its past policy. The Cliftona probably will run the same program the balance of Saturday afternoon and evening as it does for the special matinee.

However, Chakeres officials said they might change in the evening to programs of greater interest to adult audiences.

No discussion was held as to when the six-week test would agreement, and to further defraud the beneficiaries of the welfare fund. We could not therefore, recommend its acceptance by the individual mine workers.

"There is only one issue: Shall the existing agreement be honored?"

Mr. Truman is expected to invoke the emergency section of the Taft-Hartley law which calls first for a board of inquiry and then a 80-day court order against the strike.

The government's final effort to mediate the current walkout was made Monday in a joint meeting of coal operators and UMW representatives which Lewis boycotted.

Ching submitted a proposal which called for Lewis to end the strike and for both sides to lay their pension plan controversy before a three-man fact-finding board.

The operators "reluctantly" accepted the proposition. Lewis' subordinates tentatively turned it down.

Alcohol Experts Urge Schools Study Problem

COLUMBUS, March 23—Ohio closed its first Symposium on Alcoholism here today with a plea for education in the public schools on the problems of liquor.

Raymond J. Carthy, director of the Ohio Clinic at New Haven, Conn., maintained that "no community agency reaching as many young people and their families is in a position to be as objective as the school in counseling youth."

Ralph M. Henderson of New York, assistant director of the National Committee on Alcoholism, backed up McCarthy's statements. He said:

"The first big task confronting any community is to bring about a change of attitudes by uprooting old misconceptions, by presenting factual information, and by bringing the problem out in the open and recognizing it for just what it is—a disease or illness. The only sure way to bring this about is through an active and continued campaign of education."

Henderson said some progress is being made through Alcoholics Anonymous and the Yale Plan Clinic. However, he said:

"In the past 100 years, the American public has responded to this problem by denying it; by laughing at it; by cursing drinkers, drunks and distillers; by throwing the alcoholic in jail; by shaking of heads, and by passing laws against drinking. All of these responses are of course, escapist, ludicrous, or downright vicious and cruel."

Service Set At Schoenbrunn

NEW PHILADELPHIA, March 23—An Easter dawn service, first held 175 years ago, will be re-enacted Sunday at 5:45 a. m., at Schoenbrunn, where Ohio's first town and Protestant church were established.

Schoenbrunn, although wiped out by Indians and not a permanent settlement, has been reconstructed and now is a state memorial. It is located two miles southeast of New Philadelphia on U. S. Route 250.

The services in the little log church will be conducted by the Rev. Roy Grams, pastor of the Doyer Moravian church.

New Cleveland Hospital Seen

CLEVELAND, March 23—Another new hospital for the Cleveland area was virtually assured today as backers of the project reported nearly $900,000 of a $1,500,000 goal has been raised.

The hospital, to be known as Physicians and Surgeons, will cost $3,750,000. Plans for the 150-bed hospital also have been drawn. It will be located in suburban Cleveland Heights.

Herman S. Mesherov, general chairman of the building fund campaign, said doctors had contributed $231,000 of the public subscription total so far collected.

The Grand and the Saginaw rivers began falling this morning and most streams appeared to be safely below the flood stage even with statewide showers predicted for tomorrow.

Hundreds of Michigan residents still remained homeless, however, and countless secondary roads were completely impassable leaving some rural communities stranded.

In the southern part of the state a constant guard still is being maintained along the Battle Creek and Kalamazoo rivers but the worst danger appears to have passed.

GOP chieftains are confident the legislation will reach the White House well in advance of the crucial April 18 elections in Italy.

In the Senate, which passed March 13 a $5.3 billion bill confined to 16 Western European nations, debate is scheduled on a separate measure furnishing an additional $275 million in military aid for Greece and Turkey.

Still a third Senate bill, containing $463 million for China, will be taken up next, thus giving the Senate a chance to go on record on all three measures included in the House's "one-package" bill.

Pumping Gear Arriving Here

First pieces of the new pumping equipment to be installed by the Circleville water department at its pump station began arriving this week.

Ervin Leist, manager of the department, said 18 pieces of pipe and a bag of fittings are here. The new 1000-gallon per minute pump is expected the first of April.

He said the new pump will be electrically operated, but will have a gasoline engine standby in case of emergency. Contract for the pump and fittings was let last October.

Bids were being received Tuesday by the water department on three items recently approved by city council.

Leist said bids are open for a portable air compressor; removal and salvage of the old stream water pump which will be replaced by the new electrically operated pump; and a 3,000-foot supply of pipe for water mains.

SINATRA TAKES THE PLUNGE

Famed Crooner Joins Ranks of Singers Seeking Success In Non-Musical Dramas

By VICTOR GUNSON
Central Press Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD—Frank Sinatra and Marilyn Maxwell are the latest Hollywood notables to prove that the fascination of straight drama is as alluring as ever.

Both have just momentarily deserted their singing careers for acting assignments as demanding as any to be found in this land of make believe.

Frank, who first found fame as the crooning idol of the bobby soxers, has just completed the mature role of Father Paul in "The Miracle of the Bells" for Jesse Lasky.

Marilyn, whose voice has charmed millions on the screen and radio and with big name bands, does not sing a note as she plays the hard-boiled, double-crossing girl friend of George Raft in "Race Street."

In her switch Marilyn even went so far as to change from a blond to a brunette.

Sinatra has been very frank that he wanted very much to play the role of a priest, and he hopes the result will prove his sincerity. However, he has not yet looked at himself playing Father Paul on the screen.

"The truth is that I'm afraid," Frank said today. "I hope the public likes me. As far as I'm concerned, I don't intend to see the picture until it reaches the second-run theaters. By that time, almost everyone will have had time to form their own opinions as to how well I did."

MARILYN quit a studio last summer because she felt she wasn't making fast enough progress, and her new studio's production boss, youthful Dore Schary, immediately signed her to a four-picture contract.

Neither Frank nor Marilyn have yet given any indication that they plan anything as radical as did

Dick Powell, formerly one of the screen's top singing stars, when he bolted such roles 10 years ago. Powell won the studio over to terminate his contract after he had made it plain he regarded most musicals as "just plain silly."

"It's okay for someone to start singing at a party or something like that," Powell told me at that time. "However, when you're asked to stop suddenly in the street and break into song with full orchestral accompaniment, it's ridiculous."

DICK went through a few lean years before he convinced Hollywood he could play some of the toughest roles the screen has ever seen. He almost gave up when one studio wouldn't let him play the role which Fred MacMurray ultimately got in "Double Indemnity."

Then a studio took a chance that he could be hard-boiled enough for "Murder, My Sweet," and that sent him soaring to the heights again. Right now he is playing another tough role in "Station West" after making a hit in "Assigned to Treason."

The studio has another singer who is looking for a change of pace—beauteous Jane Greer, who first became famous giving out sultry numbers with the bands. Jane wants to be a comedienne.

Then there is Margaret Whiting, who thrills the radio audience. She'd like a chance at drama. When asked why, her answer was simple: "I guess it's the ham in me."

Both Jane and Margaret, if they have the dramatic talent as well as the good fortune, might carve out the kind of career Irene Dunne has made for herself.

For Irene came to Hollywood famed for her golden voice. Then came her role in one of the most successful comedies Hollywood has ever produced, "The Awful Truth."

More light roles followed but she's famous for the variety of parts she can undertake, ranging from "Anna and the King of Siam" to "Life with Father" and "I Remember Mama."

On preventative methods to steer children to the Cliftona. They still may attend programs at either the Grand or the Circle theatres.

The council agreed to provide adult supervisors for the special matinee "to keep children from tearing up the place."

Executors Named For Estate

Clarence L. Corkwell has been named executor of the Mary Jane Noble estate in the will approved Monday in Pickaway County probate court.

The original will which was made out in 1940 contained two codicils supplementing provisions in the first papers.

All property affected by the will was located in Monroe Township. The household goods were left to a brother-in-law, Charles C. Arledge and a friend Jessie Marvin Cupp. The latter also received 19 acres of land.

Two additional friends, Harry N. and Nellie M. Smith, were bequeathed 40 acres of land from the Noble estate which adjoins the Smith property.

Frank Coleman, business agent for AFL-Local 348 truck drivers union, said that drivers for the Gulf Oil Co. had returned to work. He added that Gulf drivers were not involved in the dispute. Two other companies, Standard Oil and Sun Oil, are not affected.

The union has asked a 30-cents hourly increase. The companies made a 5-1/2-cent counter offer before negotiations ended.

Grange Warned Of Possible War

COLUMBUS, March 23—Members of the Ohio State Grange today considered a solemn warning that a third world war may destroy Democracy for all time.

State Grange Master Joseph W. Fichter, who also serves as chaplain of the National Grange, told the opening session of the State Grange conference that if the world embarks on a program to make the earth an armed camp, the United States may "exploit our resources to such an extent that it may mean the end of our Democracy as we know it."

Fichter said the united nations constituted "our greatest hope."

THE PROVISION of the bill permitting married couples in all states to have their incomes reduced taxes is regarded as a major reason for the overwhelming sentiment for the legislation.

The bill also cuts income tax rates five to 12.6 percent, increases the personal income tax exemption from $500 to $600, gives special exemptions to the aged and blind, and extends the splitting principle for married couples to state and gift taxes.

The council agreed to provide adult supervisors for the special matinee "to keep children from tearing up the place."

Three main points of the council's preliminary campaign were ignored at the Monday evening meeting. First, no discussion was held concerning serial stories which, the council has contended, "leaves children in highly nervous conditions from cliff-hanging sequences."

Second, no discussion was held on clearing the Cliftona after the matinee to keep children from spending many hours in the theatre.

Parley Booked On Fuel Strike

AKRON, March 23—The first meeting between gasoline fuel distributors and their striking truck drivers was to be held here today.

The session was arranged by Alex T. Pinkney, federal labor conciliator from Cleveland.

Frank Coleman, business agent for AFL-Local 348 truck drivers union, said that drivers for the Gulf Oil Co. had returned to work. He added that Gulf drivers were not involved in the dispute. Two other companies, Standard Oil and Sun Oil, are not affected.

The union has asked a 30-cents hourly increase. The companies made a 5-3-cent counter offer before negotiations ended.

Vocational Guidance Is Aired

Need To Acquaint Youths Stressed

Cincinnati Kiwanis Club Monday night received a pat on the back from the state director of vocational guidance for the leadership it has shown in helping local high school students determine what vocation they wish to follow in later years.

The compliment came from John Odgers, the state official, who earlier in the afternoon appeared before local high school pupils with a lecture on choosing a profession.

Kiwanis, along with Cincinnati Rotary Club and with the co-operation of Cincinnati school authorities, is sponsoring a series of lectures to help acquaint high school students here with the problems they are to face upon graduation.

Odgers said that every school needs a vocational guidance program and a fulltime director for that program. Lacking the latter, he said next best plan would be "to do just what you are doing now—using a community program."

ODGERS DECLARED that "too often young people, fresh out of high school, do not know what they are best equipped to do toward making a livelihood for themselves."

He said a guidance program will help the student determine, develop and analyze his own abilities and potentialities and that he will find there is a niche in life for him.

"The guidance program will assist the individual in understanding conditions and to make wise choices and adjustments," he said.

Odgers declared that one of the biggest problems in business and industry today is turnover in manpower. He said the state average is two to six percent per month. In one Columbus store alone, the current monthly turnover is about 15 percent.

"This makes for inefficiency," he said. "And so it is the community's job to help young persons reach a decision on what they would like to do before they become job floaters."

He urged that community action be taken to stage "career days" and "job clinics" to acquaint youths with the various phases of the different professions so that they can qualify as replacements in the future.

He suggested that a vocational guidance program should provide not only information on various careers but that a list of persons be developed for youths to interview regarding specific professions.

Rule-Breaking Cop Is Fired

COLUMBUS, March 23 — The patience of the Columbus police force apparently wears out eventually, just like that of everyone else.

The department finally fired Patrolman Howard W. Johnston, 36, after his 11th citation for breaking rules and regulations since he was appointed June 16, 1941.

Johnston was relieved after being found drunk on duty. One of his many suspensions was for six months in August, 1945, for neglect of duty.

Tired, "All-In"—Listless Feeling Brought To Halt

As Vibrant Energy Is Released To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Do you get up in the mornings still tired, feel down-and-out all day? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Overwork, undue worry, cold, flu or other illness often wears down the red-blood-cells.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloating and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Easter's Cycle of Faith

Life's tiny rivulets flow forever into that mysterious, unfathomable ocean which we call Death. The sun drinks from the dark waters and returns life-giving rain to earth, thus completing the Divine cycle of resurrection.

In this parable of Nature, we can read the promise of eternal life. At each Easter, we reaffirm our Christian faith that the souls of men shall be drawn again to the God who created them.

in performance and economy... in ruggedness and reliability!

- 1 In the world's champion Chevrolet engine, the valves are located in the head of the cylinder, directly over the pistons... hence the name, Valve-in-Head.
- 2 Valve-in-Head design provides faster intake of fuel mixture... and quicker and more complete exhaust of burned gases... all of which contributes to better performance and economy.
- 3 Valve-in-Head design also permits a more compact combustion chamber; and this, together with Chevrolet's "Blue Flame" combustion, means more driving power for the pistons—less heat loss—and maximum economy.

Automotive experts and millions of motorists agree: Valve-in-Head is far ahead because it gives an outstanding combination of performance, endurance, dependability and economy... Chevrolet—master builder of this master motor—has proved this by producing more than 20 million Valve-in-Head engines during the past thirty-seven years—engines which hold the distinction of having delivered more billions of miles of satisfaction, to more owners, over a longer period, than any other power-plant built today! We start with crude oil... the stuff gasoline and motor oil and fuel oil and a thousand things are made of.

Last year, we used about a billion and a half gallons of it. We bought it or drilled for it in Oklahoma and Texas and a dozen other states.

Then we brought it as far as fifteen hundred miles... pushed it through pipes... or towed it in barges up the Mississippi... up the Ohio... to more pipelines... to Latonia, to Lima, to Toledo, and to Cleveland.

Here it disappeared into a vast collection of complicated, expensive equipment—a refinery. After thousands of man hours and millions of feet of pipe and equipment for distilling, fractionating, cracking, dewaxing, it came out gasoline, motor oil, fuel oil.

Then... hurry it up... Ashtabula's almost out... Columbus is getting impatient... Zanesville's waiting—get it into the tank trucks... or into pipelines... out to the bulk stations... more than a hundred of them all over Ohio.

And from there, at last, gasoline into the tanks of your friend who mans or owns a Sohio station... or fuel oil in your own basement.

Yes, that's the job. That's a quick look at our business in 1947.

Did we get rich? Well, not exactly.

We said we used about a billion and a half gallons of crude. Last year we had a net earning of $16,390,585... and that's a little more than a billion and a half cents. (This figures out to 1.146¢ a gallon.) Is it too much... a cent a gallon? Would you do it?

"For 16 million?" you say... "Why sure I'd do it!"

Oh, but just a moment. In the last five years, we've had to invest $106,834,000 in new plants and equipment. In 1947 alone, we invested $29,130,000... 13 million more than we made last year... for new wells... new pipelines... new refinery equipment... new trucks... new storage tanks... a few new stations... just to serve Ohio people the way they want and need to be served! What is in the future? To serve you more... more of everything is needed... more wells, more pipelines, more refineries, and distribution equipment.

Is this easy? No, it is not easy... but, it has to be done.

TRADE WITH RUSSIA

AMID the crescendo of name-calling, distrust and bitterness in the capitals and press of the two countries, Russia and the United States continue to sell things to each other. While there is every evidence that the Department of State and the Soviet foreign ministry find it increasingly difficult to talk intelligently together, American and Russian traders still find a common language.

This trade is a source of constant irritation for the advocates of a harsh policy toward Russia. They maintain that it is foolish to ship potential war materials to Russia and her satellites while spending billions to help the rest of Europe to resist Communism. Export controls now are supposed to prevent shipment of goods which would directly aid Russia's war potential, but the line between the goods of peace and those of war is almost invisible.

In defense of continued trade, administration spokesmen say that we need materials from behind the iron curtain. Outstanding examples are magnesium and chrome, both highly important in modern metal industries and both of which we need to import. Russia has the world's greatest source of chrome, while the United States is far down the list. Russia on the other hand needs the products of American industry.

The relationship between international politics and military strategy on the one hand and foreign trade on the other cannot be dismissed. Is this not in itself evidence that as long as Russia and America can trade with each other and need to do so, we have a basic need of peace with each other? And is it not cause to hope that we may some day be able to understand each other politically? Or at least to get along with each other without fear and aggression?

The present Russian rulers may have to learn some of this the hard way. But no regime lasts forever.

THE NEW "Who's Who in America" for the first time includes Tito and Molotov, included because Americans want to know the facts of their lives. Several times that number of movie stars and popular entertainers have been included. No one can say that really important individuals have been neglected.

Delving into American history of about 1800, an investigator has found that homes on the Great Lakes were avoided by many as unhealthy. Living by the sea was admittedly wholesome, but fresh water, was thought unsafe.

Moscow wants to rule the roost, but is running into competition in the person of an elderly and experienced fellow named Uncle Sam.

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to another day of near-Summer temperature, and on the way downtown did not the beautiful lacy green of weeping willows and what in my ignorance I call yellowbird in bloom. Everywhere smiles and a new gleam in fishermen's eyes.

Fishermen all are at least a little wacky, I think. And so does every wife. If they were perfectly normal it is doubtful that they would be fishermen at all and put up with all the discomforts of their pet sport. Oh yes, I am a fisherman and am discussing my own ilk.

Consider one brief fishing jaunt a few years ago by Timmie Kline. He and a friend went to Rattlesnake creek in the late afternoon, set up camp and took to angling about dark. A gasoline lantern was providing the light. Timmie noted an unusual number of minnows in the water and on his next trip to the bait bucket discovered the reason. His companion had failed to close the top and practically all the bait was gone. Timmie straightened up in anger and knocked over the lantern which rolled down the bank and plopped out and into deep water. No one who has not had a similar experience can imagine such darkness. But the lantern finally was recovered and the pair crawled into the tent.

The night was growing cloudy, but Timmie was assured that the rain would amount to little. It did and their camp was water logged. Timmie looked out the next morning and thought he was on Lake Erie. Water everywhere, even eight feet deep over their food cache. So they decided to come home. Car bogged down on the hillside, but was freed after two hours of hard mucky work. They breathed a great sigh of relief as they made the main road, settled down for a snappy ride in comfort and then their motor's fuel pump decided to give up. Out they got, hoisted the hood and added grease to their wet, cold and muddy persons. But finally the pump was repaired. Then they discovered that the lock on the car door had chosen this time to give up and that before doing so it had sealed the door against all except a couple of hours of ingenious and hard work.

Timmie was mad. Came home and traded off the car, quit speaking to his companion for a time. Shuddered at any thought of that night and giving up fishing permanently. But as I have said, all fishermen are a little wacky. He was back on a stream bank in a few days and with the advent of this warmer weather the light in his eyes gleams as brightly as that of any other angler. Oh yes, and there were plenty of mosquitos on that Rattlesnake creek trip, too.

Arranged to make a trip to Columbus with a Pickaway delegation seeking an explanation of the delay in constructing Memorial Lake. That is the one that Buck Ryder promised would be filling with water before July 4. Buck and the politicians up Columbus way have made enough promises to fill the lake, but so far no water is impounded. Will be mighty interested to hear Buck try to pass the buck and the comments of local sportmen on the lake situation.

AN ADDITIONAL FACTOR
TACTICS in a duplicate tournament for pairs, decided by match points based on how your own scores compare with others on the same deals, are the same as those in rubber bridge a good deal of the time. But in close questions you have another factor to consider. That is the matter of what you estimate that other pairs have done with the same hands. If you feel you have a fine score already and are just seeking to protect it, try a finesse the same direction you think most of the others will do. If you feel the need of some extra good scores in order to win, then deliberately finesse the other way.

That terrifically strong bidding by South, including a jump in his own suit and a later bid above game, invited North to try the slam if he had anything at all of special value for the purpose. The latter properly decided that his heart K was just what the doctor ordered. Whether he was right or not depended on what the declarer did.

In schools established by the Navy in Trust islands of the Pacific, classes in the practical use of English are held for the native children.

At all tables of the tournament where 6-Hearts was reached West led his spade 2, the J bringing South's A. Deciding that the contract depended entirely on the heart finesse, all but one of the declarers then led to the heart K and brought back the 10, covering with the J and losing to the Q. Each of the Wests then switched to the diamond 10, so that the A beat the contract.

South at the remaining table reckoned his pair's score was only fair to that stage and that he must eke out several very good ones to be in the money. After winning the first spade trick, he decided that most if not all of the others would play the hearts the way they did. So, to be different, he finessed the heart 10 on the first round. When it won, he scored the K, led to the club A, cleared trumps with the A and then ran clubs to take all the tricks and score a big top while East went to bed with his diamond A.

These Days

For months, General Eisenhower was a candidate for the Republican nomination for President. His advocates assured the public that Eisenhower was in mind and purpose a Republican, and the general never denied that. Finally, he withdrew from that canvass and announced that he would not run for President, as no military man should, said he, which was generally regarded as a commendable statement and one that closed the case.

Now along comes a body of Democrats, principally New Dealers, who are anxious to dump Mr. Truman, for one reason or another. They seize upon Eisenhower as a Democratic candidate and we are now being assured that the general is a Democrat. Thus far, the general has not denied that he is a Democrat.

It is a fascinating political problem. In the first place, party relationships have, in some states, become so weakened by the primary system that the actual control of a party can pass out of the hands of its partisans into those of its enemies, so degenerating political parties until they become catchalls for minority pressure groups. The weakness of that is that we shall either have the confusion of no parties at all, or the worse confusion of so many parties that a small but vigorous minority can take control of the country.

Secondly, Mr. Roosevelt never regarded the Democratic party as responsible for his elevation. Anybody could have been elected in 1932; after that year, he organized the amalgam of the New Deal in which the Democratic party became little more than any other group. Certainly, even when Jim Farley and Ed Flynn were national chairmen, Sidney Hillman equalled either in power and excelled both in patronage.

Roosevelt also sought to destroy the Republican opposition not only by the marvelous technique of the smear which cracked down and humiliated individuals but also by the use of patronage. Although Henry Wallace and Harold Ickes were never among the leadership of the Republican party, they led a procession of Republicans in office under Roosevelt.

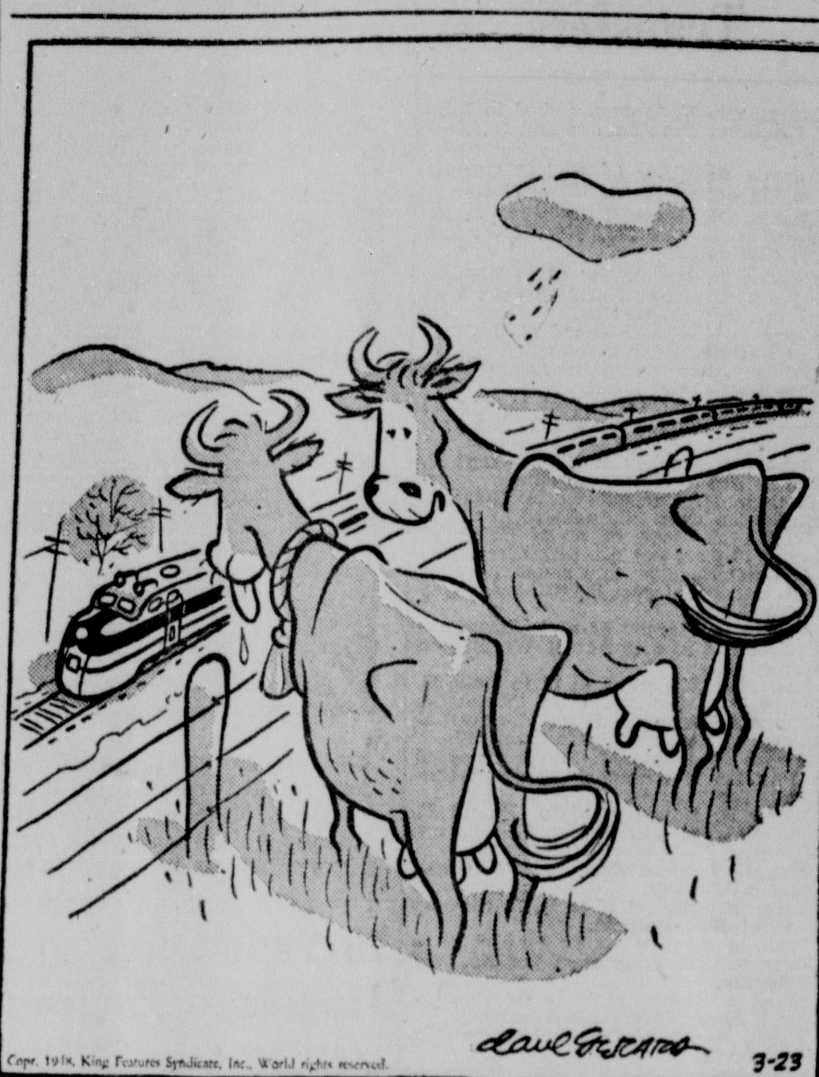

In time, Mr. Roosevelt had four Republicans in his cabinet: Wallace, Ickes, Stimson and Knox, with many in other positions. During the war, this process was accelerated and magnified. Recently, Truman has appointed some Republicans. I suppose, more readily to obtain senatorial confirmation.

At any rate, strict partisanship does not hold today as it did when a mugwump was regarded as a disreputable person. Certainly when the Republicans nominated Wendell Willkie, who had been a Socialist and a member of Tammany Hall, as their candidate, they weakened the entire theory of party control.

Thus, Eisenhower's advocates have an argument to put forth, namely, that the country needs him.

The question is, does any of this have any practical applications? Suppose the Democrats dump Truman, as some say they should, what becomes of them as a party? Whoever runs on the Democratic Party must defend the domestic and foreign policies of Roosevelt and Truman, which have been continuous in one direction. But can they fight off Henry Wallace, who is developing a new party of strictly European character? It is a party of all the dissatisfied, the unhappy, the broken in spirit. It is a party of all who have little to lose and therefore can risk all for their leader.

Blood Clots that Form in Veins

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
THE formation of a blood clot in a vein is known as venous thrombosis.

There are two types of this condition, one much more dangerous than the other. The first and relatively less serious one is called thrombophlebitis. It usually occurs in the veins near the surface. Here, the clotting is due to inflammation of the wall of the blood vessel.

Vessel Walls
The second type is known as phlebotrombosis. In these cases, the vessel walls are healthy, but a clot forms because the blood coagulates more rapidly than it should. These clots are likely to form in the deep veins of the legs. The chief hazard of this type of venous thrombosis lies in the danger that the clots may be pushed into the general circulation. Here they may travel to the lungs and block important blood vessels there, causing sudden serious illness or even death.

Injuries to the tissues, congestion in the liver, severe infections and overweight are contributing causes for phlebotrombosis, because these disorders seem to slow down the speed with which the blood flows through the veins. Shallow breathing following operation, and prolonged rest in bed, during which there is little or no muscle movement in the legs, are also factors in producing blood clots in veins.

In thrombophlebitis, the clots which form adhere closely to the inflamed wall of the vessel and there is little danger of their coming loose. Symptoms include pain, fever, and swelling of the affected parts. If the infection is confined to deeper veins, the skin is white and cold. When the superficial veins are involved, the skin is red and warm. In phlebotrombosis, the symptoms are not so constant. There may be some pain or tenderness in the calves of the legs and pain on movement of the foot. If it is suspected that the disorder is present, X-rays of the legs can be made in order to confirm the diagnosis of the presence of clots.

Getting patients up and about early after operation has reduced the number of cases of venous thrombosis. Following surgical operation in elderly patients, or in those who have had varicose veins, the application of moderately tight bandages to the legs and thighs may help to ward off the formation of blood clots in the veins.

Slow Down Clotting
There is a substance known as dicoumarol which may be given by mouth, to slow down the clotting of the blood. In certain instances, it may be advisable to give this substance as a precaution to prevent clotting in cases of broken bones, for instance, or in operations where there is special danger of thrombotic formation.

In cases where it is suspected that a clot has formed which is not attached, it is necessary to ligate or tie off the affected vein immediately in order to prevent the clot from getting into the blood stream. Thrombophlebitis is usually treated by keeping the leg at rest, applying heat, and by giving easy massage as the condition clears up.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
A. J.: I am forty-two years old and have pains in the breast. Is this something to be alarmed about?
Answer: The condition is probably not a serious one. However, it may be due to an infection or inflammation or to some type of tumor. Hence, careful study by a physician should be made as soon as possible.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
THE WAITER came and went away with their order. Then Kit folded her hands, the slender, sensitive hands that most people noticed, on the edge of the table and looked across at him.

"Mike, I have something to tell you. It's a sort of—sort of confession . . ." There! It was out. She was going to tell Mike . . . He frowned. She looked so earnest and young and lovely. "What is it, Kit?"

"It's why I left Washington and came to New York. You see, I have learned recently that my father went to prison . . . Perhaps I'd better begin at the beginning."

He didn't take his eyes from her while she told him about her parents, Aunt Chris and the night in the Washington night club when Jane had split her satisfactory world apart.

Then she said, "Everyone knew—all my friends. I just couldn't stay. But I don't know anything about the case or about my parents. Aunt Chris hadn't been close to my mother for years and she met my father only once or twice. My great-grandfather, you see, Aunt Chris is really my great-aunt—wouldn't have anything to do with my mother because she went on the stage. He was an invalid and Aunt Chris cared for him. But I keep wishing I knew more of my mother and father. What sort of people were they? Why my father stole money?"

"You poor kid," Mike patted her hand gently. "So that's what's been on your mind. Sure, I can find out. It was before my time as a newspaperman but I can look up the story and let you read the whole business. Maybe I can dig up someone who knew the case first hand, the attorney or a friend. I'll start to work on it first thing tomorrow and drive up to the country one afternoon . . ."

"You will! Oh, thanks, Mike!" "But go on . . . Tell me more about your life before you came here. Were you in love with someone before this happened? Was it broken up?"

"No. There were boys I'd known a long time and had been in school with. There was no one I was serious about. My life was just pleasant and average."

"And here you've been plunged into high dramatics, into Tracy Field's erratic life which probably won't be so erratic now if she wants to live."

"She said she didn't want to live . . . But perhaps Kirk would give Tracy a reason for living . . . Mike said, 'It's going to be very different with her from now on. Very different. She'll live. I was wrong. The more I go over it in my mind the more I'm convinced she'll put up a fight. That won't be all. Tracy will notice things."

IT HAPPENED TODAY
On March 23, 1775, Patrick Henry delivered his famous speech containing the challenge, "Give me liberty or give me death!" On the same date in 1933, the German Reichstag conferred blanket powers on Hitler, giving legislative authority for four years.

she's never noticed before, little things that she was too involved with her pleasures to see. And she'll begin to watch little people, too, that have been beneath her notice—because they are such little people. You and Mac, for instance, who'll stand by her, not from love but from loyalty. And I, too. I suppose I'll help her, too. She was always high and mighty and I was always trying to bring her down. She's down now and I'm up . . . And I suppose I'm loyal, too. Loyal," he nodded and smiled, "loyal and hungry as the proverbial wolf. Do you want to go somewhere after this, Kit, or shall I take you home?"

She looked up and smiled. "Home. I suppose it is home now and not just a place to work. And, Mike, I'll be terribly anxious to hear from you. I'll run to the window every time I see a car coming . . ."

They drove back in the late twilight, Mike feeling for the first time in years a sense of peace and security within himself rather than a sense of drifting and confusion. When they reached the house, Anita and Tony had not returned so Mike and Kit sat on the terrace and talked a while.

"Seems queer, Tracy's not being around," he said. "She knows so many people, here and abroad and in South America, and yet when she's sick, she depends upon a newspaperman she's secretly looked down on, a secretary who is almost a stranger and her old faithful housekeeper. Kirk is almost a stranger too."

"And Tony . . ."

"Yes, Tony. Poor guy. This puts him in a spot. Is he going to continue living on the charity of a sick girl? Tracy isn't any less rich but it changes the face of things now that she's sick . . . Well, I must be running along, Kit."

After Mike left, she continued to sit on the terrace in the dark for a long time. She was thinking of Kirk, standing over Tracy, holding her hand, speaking kindly to her when she saw the roadster stop before the house and Tony and Anita go in. They did not see her, for they went directly into the drawing room. But Kit, from where she was sitting, saw Tony light a cigarette. Anita curled up comfortably on the divan. And because the doors that led from the drawing room to the terrace were open she could hear what they were saying.

"But we've got to do something," Tony was saying to his wife. "We can't stay here. Tracy is sick, Anita. There won't be parties and people for her now, at least not for a while. I don't care about them but you do. That's why you wanted to come here. But that's still not the point. The point is that I'm not going to live off Tracy now. I'm not going to be a burden to her, a nuisance. It makes me feel more of a heel now that she's sick . . ."

"But, darling, we're company for her. We're . . ."

"Haven't you any pride?" he asked wretchedly. "Oh, yes, of course, you have. Pride is your whole trouble and mine, too, maybe. We have too much of it to go out and earn our own living. We couldn't keep up with our friends on what I'd make. But ours is the wrong kind of pride. If we had the right kind, we wouldn't have let her say what she said to us today. We wouldn't have taken it so that we couldn't get her money. If I were half the man I should be, I'd make her take it back, up or not. She can insult us because we have to take it."

Anita shrugged shapely shoulders. "Oh, darling, don't be so sensitive. She had to take it out on someone. Besides, she . . . well, suppose she doesn't come through. Let's be sensible. Suppose she doesn't. Isn't it foolish for us to make a change now?"

"Don't build up your hopes. Tracy isn't going to leave. She's in love with Kirk and that will keep her alive. She'll be difficult to live with but she'll live. She isn't a quitter. But do you expect me to stand around and hope she will die? Good Lord, how can you think the way you do?"

"It's just that we think differently," Anita said sweetly. "Yes, but I've always gone over to your side. I've listened to you and—what am I? Where am I? A blasted parasite! Anita, one of these days and soon I'm not going to listen to you. I don't know what I'm going to do yet but I'm going to do something. And you will have to like it—or else."

Kit feared that if they should decide to come out on the terrace they would think she was eavesdropping. Quietly she left and went up the back stairs to her room.

For three weeks Kit went to the hospital almost every day. Usually Cecil took her in though several times Tony drove the roadster and she went with him. She found Tracy in moods which ranged from a stubborn refusal to talk to her usual lively interest in her own affairs. More attractive in her lounging robes and lacy bed-jackets, looking more rested than Kit had ever seen her, she inquired about the management of the house. Kit tried to be gentle and cheerful, always mentioning that the house was cool and lovely. She sensed that Tracy loved the house for the complimentary things her friends said about it.

TRADE WITH RUSSIA

AMID the crescendo of name-calling, distrust and bitterness in the capitals and press of the two countries, Russia and the United States continue to sell things to each other. While there is every evidence that the Department of State and the Soviet foreign ministry find it increasingly difficult to talk intelligently together, American and Russian traders still find a common language.

This trade is a source of constant irritation for the advocates of a harsh policy toward Russia. They maintain that it is foolish to ship potential war materials to Russia and her satellites while spending billions to help the rest of Europe to resist Communism. Export controls now are supposed to prevent shipment of goods which would directly aid Russia's war potential, but the line between the goods of peace and those of war is almost invisible.

In defense of continued trade, administration spokesmen say that we need materials from behind the iron curtain. Outstanding examples are magnesium and chrome, both highly important in modern metal industries and both of which we need to import. Russia has the world's greatest source of chrome, while the United States is far down the list. Russia on the other hand needs the products of American industry.

The relationship between international politics and military strategy on the one hand and foreign trade on the other cannot be dismissed. Is this not in itself evidence that as long as Russia and America can trade with each other and need to do so, we have a basic need of peace with each other? And is it not cause to hope that we may some day be able to understand each other politically? Or at least to get along with each other without fear and aggression?

The present Russian rulers may have to learn some of this the hard way. But no regime lasts forever.

'Round Circleville - - - - Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to another day of near-Summer temperature, and on the way downtown did note the beautiful lacy green of weeping willows and what in my ignorance I call yellowbud in bloom. Everywhere smiles and a new gleam in fishermen's eyes.

Fishermen all are at least a little wacky, I think. And so does every wife. If they were perfectly normal it is doubtful that they would be fishermen at all and put up with all the discomforts of their pet sport. Oh yes, I am a fisherman and am discussing my own ilk.

Consider one brief fishing jaunt a few years ago by Timmie Kline. He and a friend went to Rattlesnake creek in the late afternoon, set up camp and took to angling about dark. A gasoline lantern was providing the light. Timmie noted an unusual number of minnows in the water and on his next trip to the bait bucket discovered the reason. His companion had failed to close the top and practically all the bait was gone. Timmie straightened up in anger and knocked over the lantern which rolled down the bank and plopped out and into deep water. No one who has not had a similar experience can imagine such darkness. But the lantern finally was recovered and the pair crawled into the tent.

The night was growing cloudy, but Timmie was assured that the rain would amount to little. It did and their camp was water logged. Timmie looked out the next morning and thought he was on Lake Erie. Water everywhere, even eight feet deep over their food cache. So they decided to come home. Car bogged down on the hillside, but was freed after two hours of hard muddy work. They breathed a great sigh of relief as they made the main road, settled down for a snappy ride in comfort and then their motor's fuel pump decided to give up. Out they got, hoisted the hood and added grease to their wet, cold and muddy persons. But finally the pump was repaired. Then they discovered that the lock on the car door had chosen this time to give up and that before doing so it had sealed the door against all except a couple of hours of ingenious and hard work.

Timmie was mad. Came home and traded off the car, quit speaking to his companion for a time. Shuddered at any thought of that night and giving up fishing permanently. But as I have said, all fishermen are a little wacky. He was back on a stream bank in a few days and with the advent of this warmer weather the light in his eyes gleams as brightly as that of any other angler. Oh yes, and there were plenty of mosquitoes on that Rattlesnake creek trip, too.

Arranged to make a trip to Columbus with a Pickaway delegation seeking an explanation of the delay in constructing Memorial Lake. That is the one that Buck Ryder promised would be filling with water before July 4. Buck and the politicians up Columbus way have made enough promises to fill the lake, but so far no water is impounded. Will be mighty interested to hear Buck try to pass the buck and the comments of local sportsmen on the lake situation.

Blood Clots that Form in Veins

By HERMAN N. RUNDEN, M.D.

THE formation of a blood clot in a vein is known as venous thrombosis.

There are two types of this condition, one much more dangerous than the other. The first and relatively less serious one is called thrombophlebitis. It usually occurs in the veins near the surface. Here, the clotting is due to inflammation of the wall of the blood vessel.

Vein Wall

The second type is known as phlebotrombosis. In these cases, the vessel walls are healthy, but a clot forms because the blood clots more rapidly than it should. These clots are likely to form in the deep veins of the legs. The chief hazard of this type of venous thrombosis lies in the danger that the clots may be pushed into the general circulation. Here they may travel to the lungs and block important blood vessels there, causing sudden serious illness or even death.

Injuries to the tissues, congestion in the liver, severe infections and overweight are contributing causes for phlebotrombosis, because these disorders seem to slow down the speed with which the blood flows through the veins. Shallow breathing following operation, and prolonged rest in bed, during which there is little or no muscle movement in the legs, are also factors in producing blood clots in veins.

In thrombophlebitis, the clots which form adhere closely to the inflamed wall of the vessel and there is little danger of their coming loose. Symptoms include pain, fever, and swelling of the affected parts. If the infection is confined to deeper veins, the skin is white and cold. When the superficial veins are involved, the skin is red and warm. In phlebotrombosis, the symptoms are not as constant. There may be some pain or tenderness in the calves of the legs and pain on movement of the foot. If it is suspected that the disorder is present, X-rays of the legs can be made in order to confirm the diagnosis of the presence of clots.

Getting patients up and about early after operation has reduced the number of cases of venous thrombosis. Following surgical operation in elderly patients, or in those who have had varicose veins, the application of moderately tight bandages to the legs and thighs may help to ward off the formation of blood clots in the veins.

Slow Down Clotting

There is a substance known as dicoumarol which may be given by mouth, to slow down the clotting of the blood. In certain instances, it may be advisable to give this substance as a precaution to prevent clotting as in cases of broken bones, for instance, or in operations where there is special danger of thrombosis formation.

In cases where it is suspected that a clot has formed which is not attached, it is necessary to ligate or tie off the affected vein immediately in order to prevent the clot from getting into the blood stream.

Thrombophlebitis is usually treated by keeping the leg at rest, applying heat, and by giving easy massage as the condition clears up.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. J.: I am forty-two years old and have pains in the breast. Is this something to be alarmed about?

Answer: The condition is probably not a serious one. However, it may be due to an infection or inflammation or to some type of tumor. Hence, careful study by a physician should be made as soon as possible.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

AN ADDITIONAL FACTOR

TACTICS in a duplicate tournament for pairs, decided by match points based on how your own scores compare with others on the same deals, are the same as those in rubber bridge a good deal of the time. But in close questions you have another factor to consider. That is the matter of what you estimate that other pairs have done with the same hands. If you feel you have a fine score already and are just seeking to protect it, try a finesse the same direction you think most of the others will do. If you feel the need of some extra good scores in order to win, then deliberately finesse the other way.

Timmie was mad. Came home and traded off the car, quit speaking to his companion for a time. Shuddered at any thought of that night and giving up fishing permanently. But as I have said, all fishermen are a little wacky. He was back on a stream bank in a few days and with the advent of this warmer weather the light in his eyes gleams as brightly as that of any other angler. In schools established by the Navy in Trust Islands of the Pacific, classes in the practical use of English are held for the native children.

At all tables of the tournament where 6-Hearts was reached West led his spade 2, the J bringing South's A. Deciding that the contract depended entirely on the heart finesse, all but one of the declarers then led to the heart K and brought back the 10, covering with the J and losing to the Q. Each of the Wests then switched to the diamond 10, so that the A beat the contract.

South at the remaining table reckoned his pair's score was only fair to that stage and that he must elude out several very good ones to be in the money. After winning the first spade trick, he decided that most if not all of the others would play the hearts the way they did. So, to be different, he finessed the heart 10 on the first round. When it won, he scored the K, led to the club A, cleared trumps with the A and then ran clubs to take all the tricks and score a big top while East went to bed with his diamond A.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

THE WAITER came and went away with their order. Then Kit folded her hands, the slender, sensitive hands that most people noticed, on the edge of the table and looked across at him.

"Mike, I have something to tell you. It's a sort of—sort of confession . . ." There it was out. She was going to tell Mike . . .

He frowned. She looked so earnest and young and lovely. "What is it, Kit?"

"It's why I left Washington and came to New York. You see, I have learned recently that my father went to prison . . . Perhaps I'd better begin at the beginning."

He didn't take his eyes from her while she told him about her parents, Aunt Chris and the night in the Washington night club when Jane had split her satisfactory world apart.

Then she said, "Everyone knew—all my friends. I just couldn't stay. But I don't know anything about the case or about my parents. Aunt Chris hadn't been close to my mother for years and she met my father only once or twice. My great-grandfather—you see, Aunt Chris is really my great-aunt—wouldn't have anything to do with my mother because she went on the stage. He was an invalid and Aunt Chris cared for him. But I keep wishing I knew more of my mother and father. What sort of people were they? Why my father stole money?"

"You poor kid." Mike patted her hand gently. "So that's what's been on your mind. Sure, I can find out. It was before my time as a newspaperman but I can look up the story and let you read the whole business. Maybe I can dig up someone who knew the case in first hand, the attorney or a friend. I'll start to work on it first thing tomorrow and drive up to the country one afternoon . . ."

"You will? Oh, thanks, Mike!"

"But go on . . . Tell me more about your life before you came here. Were you in love with someone before this happened? Was it broken up?"

"No. There were boys I'd known a long time and had been in school with. There was no one I was serious about. My life was just pleasant and average."

"And here you've been plunged into high drama, into Tracy Field's erratic life which probably won't be so erratic now if she wants to live."

"She said she didn't want to live . . ." But perhaps Kirk would give Tracy a reason for living . . .

Mike said, "It's going to be very different with her from now on. Very different. She'll live. I was wrong. The more I go over it in my mind the more I'm convinced she'll put up a fight. That won't be all. Tracy will notice things."

she's never noticed before, little things that she was too involved with her pleasures to see. And she'll begin to watch little people, too, that have been beneath her notice—because they are such little people. You and Mac, for instance, who'll stand by her, not from love but from loyalty. And I, too. I suppose I'll help her, too. She was always high and mighty and I was always trying to bring her down. She's down now and I'm up . . . And I suppose I'm loyal, too. Loyal," he nodded and smiled. "Loyal and hungry as the proverbial wolf. Do you want to go somewhere after this, Kit, or shall I take you home?"

She looked up and smiled. "Home. I suppose it is home now and not just a place to work. And, Mike, I'll be terribly anxious to hear from you. I'll run to the window every time I see a car coming . . ."

"The drove back in the late twilight, Mike feeling for the first time in years a sense of peace and security within himself rather than a sense of drifting and confusion. When they reached the house, Anita and Tony had not returned so Mike and Kit sat on the terrace and talked a short while."

"Seems queer, Tracy's not being around," he said. "She knows as many people here and abroad and in South America, and yet when she's sick, she depends upon a newspaperman she's secretly looked down on, a secretary who is almost a stranger and her old faithful housekeeper. Kirk is almost a stranger too."

"And Tony . . ."

"Yes, Tony. Poor guy. This puts him in a spot. Is he going to continue living on the charity of a sick girl? It traces the face of things now that she's sick . . . Well, I must be running along, Kit."

After Mike left, she continued to sit on the terrace in the dark for a long time. She was thinking of Kirk, standing over Tracy, holding her hand, speaking kindly to her when she saw the roadster stop before the house and Tony and Anita go in. They did not see her, for they went directly into the drawing room. But Kit, from where she was sitting, saw Tony light a cigarette. Anita curled up comfortably on the divan. And because the doors that led from the drawing room to the terrace were open she could hear what they were saying.

"But we've got to do something," Tony was saying to his wife. "We can't stay here. Tracy is sick, Anita. There won't be parties and people for her now, at least not for a while. I don't care about them but you do. That's why you wanted to come here. But that's still not the point. The point is that I'm not going to live off Tracy now. I'm not going to be a burden to her, a nuisance. It makes me feel more of a heel now that she's sick . . ."

"But, darling, we're company for her. We're . . ."

"Haven't you any pride?" he asked wretchedly. "Oh, yes, of course, you have. Pride is your whole trouble and mine, too, maybe. We have too much of it to go out and earn our own living. We couldn't keep up with our friends on what I'd make. But ours is the wrong kind of pride. If we had the right kind, we wouldn't have let her say what she said to us today. We wouldn't have taken it about our being hopeful she'd die so that we could get her money. If I were half the man I should be, I'd make her take it back, III or not. She can insult us because we have to take it."

Anita shrugged shapely shoulders. "Oh, darling, don't be so sensitive. She had to take it out on someone. Besides, she . . . well, suppose she doesn't come through. Let's be sensible. Suppose she doesn't. Isn't it foolish for us to make a change now?"

"Don't build up your hopes. Tracy isn't going to die. She's in love with Kirk and that will keep her alive. She'll be difficult to live with but she'll live. She isn't a quitter. But do you expect me to stand around and hope she will die? Good Lord, how can you think the way you do?"

"It's just that we think differently," Anita said sweetly. "Yes, I've always gone over to your side. I've listened to you and—and what am I? Where am I? A blasted parasite! Anita, one of these days and soon I'm not going to listen to you. I don't know what I'm going to do yet but I'm going to do something. And you will have to like it—or else."

Kit feared that if they should decide to come out on the terrace they would think she was eavesdropping. Quietly she left and went up the back stairs to her room.

For three weeks Kit went to the hospital almost every day. Usually Cecil took her in though several times Tony drove the roadster and she went with him. She found Tracy in moods which ranged from a stubborn refusal to talk to her usual lively interest in her own affairs. More attractive in her lounging robes and lacy bed-jackets, looking more rested than Kit had ever seen her, she inquired about her mail, her phone calls and the management of the house. Kit tried to be gentle and cheerful, always mentioning that the house was cool and lovely. She sensed that Tracy loved the house for the complimentary things her friends said about it.

JOBS UPON A TIME

Radio and Moving Picture Comedian Red Skelton (real name Richard Skelton) listened to the siren song of the road and joined a medicine show when he was 10, quitting his home town of Vincennes, Ind. Later he was in showboat stock, minstrel shows, vaudeville, burlesque and the circus. He made his screen debut in 1939 in "Having Wonderful Time" and his first radio appearance in 1942. Red had appeared in many pictures since his initial film and has his own radio show.

Radio and Screen Singer and Actress Jeannette MacDonald started as a chorus girl in a New York musical, and in the road show, "Irene." Her first big role was in the Greenwich Village theater production, "Fantastic Fricassee." Other productions followed and Jeannette made concert tours abroad. Her career commenced in 1929, and she was voted as one of the 10 top money making stars. She has starred in such films as Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," Romberg's "Maytime," "I Married an Angel," etc.

MODERN MANNERS

At home or in the home of friends it is incorrect to sit with the chair tilted back so that only two back legs rest on the floor. No chairs are built to stand such a strain. The glue or pegs will give way sooner or later. A man should not risk wrecking his own chairs, and certainly not those of his friends, and such a position is undignified at the very least.

YOUR FUTURE

It will be a very good thing if you keep your mind on your job or your home; go over your budget; do odd jobs, etc. You will derive much benefit and happiness in your next year if you curb your tendency to be overcritical. Intellectual pursuits progress very well during this time.

HOW'D YOU MAKE OUT?

Fire Chief Warns City On Hazards

Spring Cleanup Tips Given

Fire Chief, Talmer Wise, has issued a plea to all citizens of Circleville to cooperate in Spring cleanup to safeguard the community against fire, accidents, disease, and to improve its appearance.

For the home check-up, the Chief suggests that householders:

Get rid of all rubbish and papers in the attic, closets, basement, yard and garage. Tie them into bundles for salvage.

Check stoves, furnaces and heaters. Have all repair work done now. See that floors under stoves are protected by metal, bricks, or cement. Insulate all burnable material subject to heat radiated from stoves, furnaces, and pipes. Empty hot ashes into metal containers.

CLEAN CHIMNEY and check for cracks, loose bricks and mortar. Place metal screens in front of fireplace. Place portable heaters so they can't be knocked over.

Distribute enough ash trays in convenient places for smokers. See that matches are out of reach of young children and placed in safe containers.

Check gas connections on portable heaters. Shut-off valves should be located on pipe before rubber tubing.

Never use gasoline, benzene or naphtha for cleaning. Don't quicken a sluggish fire by pouring on kerosene. It may easily flame out of control.

Destroy paint tags and oily cleaning cloths or put them in a metal container with a cover. Hang up oily mops so that air can circulate through them.

Inspect all electric service cords and connections on lamps and appliances. Use only 15 ampere fuses for household circuits. Never permit "bridging" or burned-out fuses with wires or coins. Such practices remove all protection against "shorts" or overloading of circuits.

Lausche Gains District Vote

MT. VERNON, March 23—Former Gov. Frank J. Lausche met with Democratic leaders of the 17th congressional district here today in an attempt to win their support in his fight to regain the state's executive chair.

He brought with him the newly-won backing of party organizations in the six counties of the eighth district, whose leaders voted to throw their weight behind him in the May 4 primary.

The action was a blow to the aspirations of Lausche's primary opponent, former Cleveland Mayor Ray T. Miller, who once claimed organization support in 85 of the 88 counties.

The support of executive and central committee chairmen in the eighth district was announced by James F. Laurer, of Prospect, Marion County executive and central committee chairman, who said the action was unanimous.

Driver Faces Manslaughter

KENT, March 23—Ira Edward Hayes, 20, of nearby Brady Lake, faced a possible manslaughter charge today in connection with the traffic death of Mrs. Mary Anderson Bailey.

Portage County Prosecutor Seabury H. Ford said investigation showed that Mrs. Bailey was struck eight feet from the highway and that she was dragged 57 feet by the automobile.

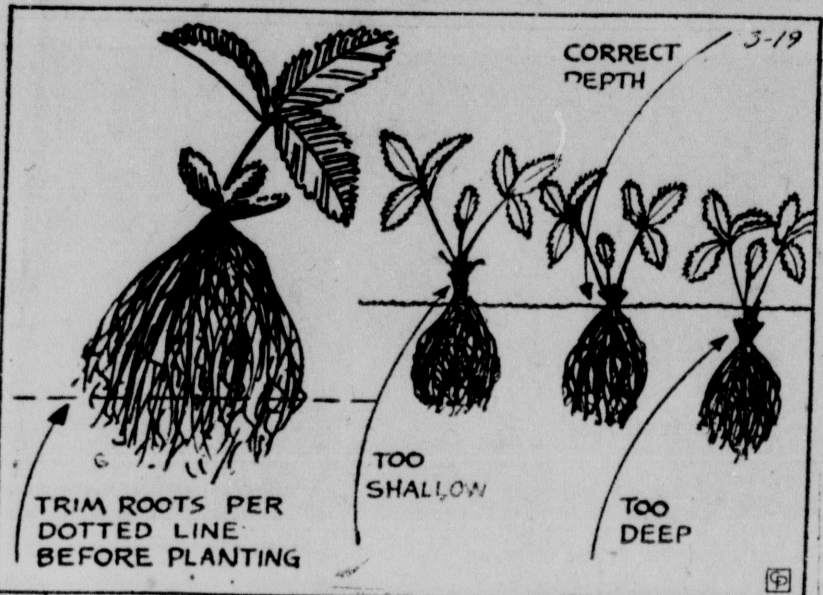

Hayes, who was arrested by sheriff's deputies and charged with driving while intoxicated, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in county jail.

Mrs. Bailey was struck Saturday night and was pronounced dead on arrival at Robinson Memorial hospital. Funeral services will be held this afternoon in Ravenna.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

Proper Start for Strawberries

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Distributed by Central Press Association

IF YOUR space is limited but you want some fruit in your home vegetable garden start a "strawberry patch." Strawberries give larger and quicker harvests for a small cost than any other garden fruit crop.

While they can be planted in either the spring or the fall, the very best time is early in the spring. Choose a cloudy day to set out the plants, or do it late in the afternoon. Keep the roots moist, being careful not to expose them to the sun or drying winds.

Before planting remove all dead leaves, small offsets and shorten the roots back to about four inches, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. This also makes for easier planting.

Proper depth of planting is important, and right and wrong ways are shown in the Garden-Graph. The crown or center of the plant, where the tiny leaves begin developing, should be just level with the surface of the soil. When set too deeply rot may develop and kill off the plants. If planted too high the roots frequently dry out.

Strawberry varieties fall into four groups: early, medium, late and Everbearing. To enjoy a long season of berries plant some of each type.

Everbearing strawberries should be planted at the same time in the spring as the early varieties. Blossoms will appear early in the summer on the Everbearing plants, but these should not be allowed to develop. Pinch them off to permit all the plant's vitality to be used for sturdy plant growth.

When this practice is followed with the Everbearing variety the plants will reward you in August with a bigger, better yield of berries. And at least one of the new Everbearers will yield fruit as early as July.

'Army Day' To Be Observed Here April 6; Guard Sets Inspection

Thurman I. Miller, Mayor of Circleville, has issued the following proclamation designating Tuesday, April 6, as "Army Day" in Circleville:

Whereas, the million or more men and women in our Army are instruments of the nation's will for security and peace, and

Whereas, free men who, throughout seventeen decades of our history, have served the United States that we might stand strong and safe among the nations of the world, and

Whereas, the million or more our soldiers, on the ground and in the air, serving shoulder to shoulder with their comrades in the Navy and of the Allied Forces, carried on and enriched the traditions established by their fathers and forefathers. Poison Believed Cause Of Death

HAMILTON, March 23—The contents of the stomach of a Dayton man found dead on a Hamilton street were being analyzed today to determine if poison killed him.

Butler County Coroner Garrett J. Boone ordered the analysis after he discovered "some evidence" that Samuel A. Lamons, 35, died of poisoning.

Police Chief John Bippus said his officers were "working on the theory that this is a case of murder." Lamons' body was discovered on a sidewalk by a passerby who reported he believed Lamons was intoxicated.

Police Chief Robert Kennedy said Weidetz was closing his garage doors after returning home with his wife, Freida, when someone cut loose from behind a tree with a .12-gauge shotgun, tearing away Weidetz' right side.

City In Dark 40 Minutes After Fire

CLEVELAND, March 23—The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company reported that power was restored to all but four industrial plants early today following a switchboard fire which plunged most of the city into darkness shortly before midnight.

Homes, buildings, radio stations and street cars were cut off from power for nearly 40 minutes by the fire.

A baby was delivered at Mount Sinai hospital by the light of candles and emergency equipment and another birth, by caesarian section, was started during the power blackout.

At Glenview hospital, a doctor worked by battery powered lights to deliver another baby. Firemen set up floodlights and an auxiliary generator at St. Ann's hospital where seven women were reported in labor.

First Assistant Fire Chief James Nimmo said the blaze was caused by a short circuit in a transformer and was preceded by a blast which blew out doors and windows in the firm's east side plant.

CEI officials, however, denied that there was any explosion and added that the cause of the fire could not be determined until technical experts investigated the damage.

Scientists estimate that there is about twice as much nickel in the earth's crust as there is copper, zinc and lead combined.

Portage County Prosecutor Seabury H. Ford said investigation showed that Mrs. Bailey was struck eight feet from the highway and that she was dragged 57 feet by the automobile.

Hayes, who was arrested by sheriff's deputies and charged with driving while intoxicated, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in county jail.

Mrs. Bailey was struck Saturday night and was pronounced dead on arrival at Robinson Memorial hospital. Funeral services will be held this afternoon in Ravenna.

Marie Antoinette is said to have complained about the many sizes and shapes of the handkerchiefs in her day. This is said to have resulted in a law decreeing that all handkerchiefs should be square.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Proper Start for Strawberries

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Distributed by Central Press Association

IF YOUR space is limited but you want some fruit in your home vegetable garden start a "strawberry patch." Strawberries give larger and quicker harvests for a small cost than any other garden fruit crop.

While they can be planted in either the spring or the fall, the very best time is early in the spring. Choose a cloudy day to set out the plants, or do it late in the afternoon. Keep the roots moist, being careful not to expose them to the sun or drying winds.

Before planting remove all dead leaves, small offsets and shorten the roots back to about four inches, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. This also makes for easier planting.

Proper depth of planting is important, and right and wrong ways are shown in the Garden-Graph. The crown or center of the plant, where the tiny leaves begin developing, should be just level with the surface of the soil. When set too deeply root may develop and kill off the plants. If planted too high the roots frequently dry out.

Strawberry varieties fall into four groups: early, medium, late and Everbearing. To enjoy a long season of berries plant some of each type.

Everbearing strawberries should be planted at the same time in the spring as the early varieties. Blossoms will appear early in the summer on the Everbearing plants, but these should not be allowed to develop. Pinch them off to permit all the plant's vitality to be used for sturdy plant growth.

When this practice is followed with the Everbearing variety the plants will reward you in August with a bigger, better yield of berries. And at least one of the new Everbearers will yield fruit as early as July.

Whereas, the President of the United States has designated the day of April 6 as "Army Day".

Now, therefore, I, Thurman I. Miller, mayor of the city of Circleville, do hereby proclaim Tuesday, April 6, 1948 as "Army Day" in accordance with a proclamation issued by Harry S. Truman, President of the United States, and I urge upon the people of Circleville to make use of this day which is so set aside to pay tribute to those gallant men and women who as members of our Armed Forces gave to much to insure the continued happiness of our nation and successfully defended our homes and traditions from our enemies whose ruthless schemes and diabolical designs would, if carried out, have destroyed the potential good of mankind for at least five hundred years to come.

(signed) Thurman I. Miller, Mayor of Circleville.

In conjunction with the proclamation, Company I, 166th Infantry, Circleville's National Guard unit, will have "open house" that date.

Jack Clifton, commander of the local unit, said the Circleville army would be opened to the public for the inspection of the materials of war on hand and the men who are on duty.

Price Reduced On Refrigerator

CINCINNATI, March 23—Good news in the form of another price reduction came from Cincinnati today.

The Crosley division of the AVCO Manufacturing Corp., announced the retail prices of 1948 "Shelvard" refrigerators would be cut from 7 to 16 percent.

City In Dark 40 Minutes After Fire

CLEVELAND, March 23—The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company reported that power was restored to all but four industrial plants early today following a switchboard fire which plunged most of the city into darkness shortly before midnight.

Homes, buildings, radio stations and street cars were cut off from power for nearly 40 minutes by the fire.

A baby was delivered at Mount Sinai hospital by the light of candles and emergency equipment and another birth, by caesarian section, was started during the power blackout.

At Glenville hospital, a doctor worked by battery powered lights to deliver another baby. Firemen set up floodlights and an auxiliary generator at St. Ann's hospital where seven women were reported in labor.

First Assistant Fire Chief James Nimmo said the blaze was caused by a short circuit in a transformer and was preceded by a blast which blew out doors and windows in the firm's east side plant.

CEI officials, however, denied that there was any explosion and added that the cause of the fire could not be determined until technical experts investigated the damage.

Scientists estimate that there is about twice as much nickel in the earth's crust as there is copper, zinc and lead combined.

Holy Land's Haganah Set For High-Gear Warfare

By International News Service
To evaluate the potential prowess of the new Jewish army, Haganah, it is necessary to inspect its training—past and present, at home and abroad.

Compared to ordinary armies, the new Jewish force has a training and combat background entirely unique in world military history.

It will be composed predominantly of the man and women of the Haganah—Palestine Jewry's 30-year-old "illegal" defense army.

And the Haganah leadership is the boiled-down product of a score or more of world armies, training systems and combat scenes.

Further, it is quite safe to say that those present Jewish soldiers who survived the past two decades did so largely because that combat training "took," and turned them into experts.

AS A RESULT, today the new Jewish army has a basic cadre

Firemen Rescue Grandmother

CLEVELAND, March 23—Firemen rescued a trapped grandmother and her eight-month-old grandson from a blazing third-floor suite of an apartment building on Cleveland's east side last night.

The grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Goldstein, and grandson, Stephen Stone, escaped injury in the fire, which caused damage estimated at $3,000.

Battalion Chief Edward Partridge said the arson squad would investigate the blaze following reports from neighbors that a person was seen to leave the scene shortly after the fire started in the basement.

Bakery Drivers Get $3 Raise

COLUMBUS, March 23—Truck drivers for four Columbus bakeries started work today under a new contract calling for a $3 weekly pay raise for over-the-road drivers.

The contract carries the provision for annual opening of the wage question in April and brings the drivers' weekly pay to $81 for six trips.

Driver-salesmen for the General, Continental and Ward baking companies and the Taystee Bread Co., also got a $3 salary jump, making their weekly pay $22 per week, plus eight per cent commissions with a weekly guarantee of $50.

Woman Files Suit Against 4 Firms

COLUMBUS, March 23—Mrs. Theodora W. Rogers had a suit on file today in Franklin County common pleas court asking one million 200 thousand dollars from four Columbus firms.

She charged that the Bob Byers and Son Real Estate Co., the Gedex Realty Corp., the Maryland Casualty Co., and Townley Court, Inc., had kept from her the "rents, issues and profits" on several downtown pieces of property since 1927.

The suit charged that Mrs. Rogers "is entitled to the immediate possession" of the properties.

of more than 30,000 World War II veterans who, for months, have been secretly training Palestine's volunteers and recruits.

Most of those training officers and men saw service in the British army—in the Jewish brigade, in the parachutists, the commandos, the behind-the-lines sabotage units, the espionage and intelligence groups, the transportation corps and elsewhere.

Literally, the Haganah handled the recruiting, despite its "illegal" status. But mostly that recruiting was a matter of selecting from the volunteers, for the British held down the number of Jews permitted to serve. Even so, the percentage was high.

There were 19,110 surviving male officers and men, 2,441 ATS (British equivalent of our Wacs) officers and enlisted women, and 837 supernumerary police under military control in the British army.

They saw service all the way from the early desert campaigns to the climax in Germany.

Countless additional Palestine Jews slipped out to join the American, the Canadian, the Australian and the French armies, usually with faked credentials—but that was war, and a fighting man was a fighting man, acceptable without too much questioning.

Finally, thousands of others saw service in the underground troops of Central Europe, fighting the Nazis from the first to the last, and becoming experts in that highly specialized and highly dangerous field.

A LITTLE-KNOWN part of present training for the future Jewish army is provided along the underground refugee trail from Central Europe to Palestine.

Since those persons who reach Palestine without benefit of passport usually have a long and arduous trip, spotted with lengthy waits at the various underground stations, the Haganah—which brings most of them to the Holy Land—has taken advantage of those delays.

Starting with the displaced persons camps, young refugee Jews are given the invaluable physical conditioning which must precede any basic training course.

Their instructor usually is a Haganah man who has smuggled himself into camp to help pave the way to Palestine for them.

By the time they arrive, such youngsters are ready for the more specialized types of military training—such as the use of weapons, combat techniques and the like.

At home in Palestine, Haganah has been even more busy in preparation for the day it could take off its wraps.

It set up its own selective service system, and it is noteworthy that the British have not interfered with its operation to any extent.

All Jews, male and female, between the ages of 17 and 35 were first required to register. In rough outline, the draft called for those under 25 to serve, regardless of whether they had wives and children. Those over that age who were with out dependents also were subject to immediate call.

50-Year 'Sweet War' To End As Governors Sample Sirup

CHARDON, March 23—A "sweet war" of 50 years standing between Ohio and Vermont is expected to be resolved here April 3.

The blindfolded governors of the two states will square off with spoons and jugs of maple sirup and then unflinchingly announce which of the two sirups is the most pleasing to the palate.

The two men, Gov. Thomas J. Herbert of Ohio and Gov. Ernest W. Gibson of Vermont, expect to settle the claims of sugar bush folks that "our maple sirup is the best."

Ohioans assert that buyers from Vermont have been purchasing their golden-sweet products in carload lots for many years, shipping it to Vermont and then selling it under "Made in Vermont" trademarks. Over 100,000 persons from

Soldier Killed In Auto Crash

SPRINGFIELD, March 23—One Wright Field soldier was killed and another was trapped alive in a wrecked automobile for almost an hour early today.

The dead man was Pfc. Francis L. Bough, about 23, stationed at the air base hospital.

Pfc. Allan B. Denton was pinned in the car he, Bough and Cpl. Harry D. Love, 27, of Gloucester, were pushing when a semi-trailer truck crashed into it from the rear.

The highway patrol reported that Denton and Bough jumped into the passenger car when they saw the truck approaching while Love jumped to one side.

Bough apparently was killed instantly in the crash, while Denton was trapped in the wreckage with a fractured pelvis. He was forced to remain there in agony for almost an hour while an acetylene torch was rushed from Springfield.

The Anglo-American-French proposal to revise the Italian peace treaty and give Trieste back to the Romans promises to become a major factor in restoring the equilibrium of Europe.

Full results of the decision may not be known for some time. Soviet Russia certainly will want to know how far such revision may go. And her inquiries may elicit information that American troops are to remain in Trieste almost indefinitely.

But whatever the eventual outcome may be, Yugoslavia is certain to remain bitterly resentful.

From a purely possessive point of view this is entirely understandable. For in the battered wreckage of Europe there are not too many places left that have the loveliness and charm of this great port on the Gulf of Venice.

It is common knowledge that one of the happiest continents of the United States occupational army is Maj. Gen. Bryant Moore's magnificent 88th "Blue Devil" Division stationed at Trieste.

THE FAMILIAR refrain "we want to go home" probably is less often heard there than anywhere else in Europe or the Far East. This is due in large measure to the fact that Trieste itself is not only important militarily and strategically. Except for brutally strong winds during part of the Winter, its climate is magnificent.

Like many old Roman cities, Trieste has beautiful buildings and churches, none of them damaged by this war at any rate.

FOUR SETS of twins in the second grade of a Pittsburgh school line up beside blackboard to straighten out their identities for the puzzled teacher's information. (International Soundphoto)

Its water is warm and blue and the countryside has a mellow charm that once experienced is never forgotten.

There is at least some reason to believe, however, that despite all his blustering, Tito actually may have written off Trieste as a loss.

For many months, Yugoslav and Soviet men and money have been poured into the less attractive but also important port of Fiume to build this up as a Danubian outlet to the detriment of Italian trade and traffic through Trieste.

At the same time, of course, Communist agents have been losing no time in the latter city, hoping that it can be made to contribute its part toward a Red victory in the Italian elections scheduled for April 18.

Predictions were made not long ago that major concessions were planned for Italy as perhaps belated counteroffensives to Soviet propaganda and expansion. The realization that they will be voting for Trieste if they vote against the Communists has now

By the time they arrive, such youngsters are ready for the more specialized types of military training—such as the use of weapons, combat techniques and the like.

At home in Palestine, Haganah has been even more busy in preparation for the day it could take off its wraps.

It set up its own selective service system, and it is noteworthy that the British have not interfered with its operation to any extent.

All Jews, male and female, between the ages of 17 and 35 were first required to register. In rough outline, the draft called for those under 25 to serve, regardless of whether they had wives and children. Those over that age who were without dependents also were subject to immediate call.

Firemen Rescue Grandmother

CLEVELAND, March 23—Firemen rescued a trapped grandmother and her eight-month-old grandson from a blazing third-floor suite of an apartment building on Cleveland's east side last night.

The grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Goldstein, and grandson, Stephen Stone, escaped injury in the fire, which caused damage estimated at $3,000.

Battalion Chief Edward Partridge said the arson squad would investigate the blaze following reports from neighbors that a person was seen to leave the scene shortly after the fire started in the basement.

Bakery Drivers Get $3 Raise

COLUMBUS, March 23—Truck drivers for four Columbus bakeries started work today under a new contract calling for a $3 weekly pay raise for over-the-road drivers.

The contract carries the provision for annual opening of the wage question in April and brings the drivers' weekly pay to $81 for six trips.

Driver-salesmen for the General, Continental and Ward baking companies and the Taystee Bread Co., also got a $3 salary jump, making their weekly pay $22 per week, plus eight per cent commissions with a weekly guarantee of $50.

Woman Files Suit Against 4 Firms

COLUMBUS, March 23—Mrs. Theodora W. Rogers had a suit on file today in Franklin County common pleas court asking one million 200 thousand dollars from four Columbus firms.

She charged that the Bob Byers and Son Real Estate Co., the Gedex Realty Corp., the Maryland Casualty Co., and Townley Court, Inc., had kept from her the "rents, issues and profits" on several downtown pieces of property since 1927.

The suit charged that Mrs. Rogers "is entitled to the immediate possession" of the properties.

50-Year 'Sweet War' To End As Governors Sample Sirup

CHARDON, March 23—A "sweet war" of 50 years standing between Ohio and Vermont is expected to be resolved here April 3.

The blindfolded governors of the two states will square off with spoons and jugs of maple sirup and then unflinchingly announce which of the two sirups is the most pleasing to the palate.

The two men, Gov. Thomas J. Herbert of Ohio and Gov. Ernest W. Gibson of Vermont, expect to settle the claims of sugar bush folks that "our maple sirup is the best."

Ohioans assert that buyers from Vermont have been purchasing their golden-sweet products in carload lots for many years, shipping it to Vermont and then selling it under "Made In Vermont" trademarks.

Over 100,000 persons from both states are expected at the Chardon festival, which is being held from April 24.

THE "WAR" BETWEEN the states broke out anew last Summer when William Loeb, editor of The Burlington (Vt.) Daily News, sent a gift of Vermont maple sirup to A. F. Davis, an industrialist in Cleveland.

Davis disputed Loeb's claim that "Vermont sirup has no equal."

He filled a jug full of the sweet stuff from his own farm in Geauga County, labelled it "the best obtainable" and sent it to the newspaper editor.

The Geauga Maple Festival Association joined Davis' "war of words," while the Vermont Maple Sugar Producers Association backed up Loeb.

The two groups decided to accept the "final" judgment of the two blindfolded governors at the festival.

In case of a deadlock, Roger W. Riis of Readers' Digest, will be the final judge. Vermont is the nation's leading maple sirup producer, with Ohio in third place.

Soldier Killed In Auto Crash

SPRINGFIELD, March 23—One Wright Field soldier was killed and another was trapped alive in a wrecked automobile for almost an hour early today.

The dead man was Pfc. Francis L. Bough, about 23, stationed at the air base hospital.

Pfc. Allan B. Denton was pinned in the car he, Bough and Cpl. Harry D. Love, 27, of Gloucester, were pushing when a semi-trailer truck crashed into it from the rear.

The highway patrol reported that Denton and Bough jumped into the passenger car when they saw the truck approaching while Love jumped to one side.

Bough apparently was killed instantly in the crash, while Denton was trapped in the wreckage with a fractured pelvis. He was forced to remain there in agony for almost an hour while an acetylene torch was rushed from Springfield.

The Anglo-American-French proposal to revise the Italian peace treaty and give Trieste back to the Romans promises to become a major factor in restoring the equilibrium of Europe.

Full results of the decision may not be known for some time.

Soviet Russia certainly will want to know how far such revision may go. And her inquiries may elicit information that American troops are to remain in Trieste almost indefinitely.

But whatever the eventual outcome may be, Yugoslavia is certain to remain bitterly resentful.

From a purely possessive point of view this is entirely understandable. For in the battered wreckage of Europe there are not too many places left that have the loveliness and charm of this great port on the Gulf of Venice.

It is common knowledge that one of the happiest continents of the United States occupational army is Maj. Gen. Bryant Moore's magnificent 88th "Blue Devil" Division stationed at Trieste.

THE FAMILIAR refrain "we want to go home" probably is less often heard there than anywhere else in Europe or the Far East. This is due in large measure to the fact that Trieste itself is not only important militarily and strategically. Except for brutally strong winds during part of the Winter, its climate is magnificent.

Like many old Roman cities, Trieste has beautiful buildings and churches, none of them damaged by this war at any rate.

FOUR SETS of twins in the second grade of a Pittsburgh school line up beside blackboard to straighten out their identities for the puzzled teacher's information. (International Soundphoto)

Its water is warm and blue and the countryside has a mellow charm that once experienced is never forgotten.

There is at least some reason to believe, however, that despite all his blustering, Tito actually may have written off Trieste as a loss.

For many months, Yugoslav and Soviet men and money have been poured into the less attractive but also important port of Fiume to build this up as a Danubian outlet to the detriment of Italian trade and traffic through Trieste.

At the same time, of course, Communist agents have been losing no time in the latter city, hoping that it can be made to contribute its part toward a Red victory in the Italian elections scheduled for April 18.

Predictions were made not long ago that major concessions were planned for Italy as perhaps belated counteroffensives to Soviet propaganda and expansion. The realization that they will be voting for Trieste if they vote against the Communists has now been driven home to every man in Italy.

Second Fall Kills Man

DOVER, March 23—It took two ordinarily fatal accidents to kill Garfield Mathias, 67, retired Dover steelworker.

22 Horses Given 200-1 Odds In Kentucky Derby

CHICAGO, March 23—Twenty-two horses are at 200-to-1, 10 at 400-to-1, and one—F. J. Marvin's brown colt Dan Chan—at 500-to-1—in the latest midwestern future book line on the 1948 Kentucky Derby.

Since odds makers generally hang together like stapled second sheets, it is safe to suppose that the new line is about the same from coast to coast. Citation, the tremendous Calumet Farm runner, remains at an utterly unattractive 8-to-5 for win, and the bay Bull Lea-Hyproplane colt is odds on to like him for second, third or fourth. The latest prices there are 4-to-5, 2-to-5 and 1-to-5, respectively.

Three of Citation's stablemates—in all, six Calumet Farm three-year-olds were nominated for the 74th Kentucky Derby May 1—are favorites too. Coalton, another Bull Lea colt which has shown to good advantage, is second only to Citation in the future book. Coalton is 8-to-1; there follows the King Ranch's Better Self, which is 15-to-1, and two other Calumet steeds, Free America and Bewitch, both at 20-to-1.

THERE ARE FEW takers on Bewitch, however, since many wise men say the leading juvenile money winner of 1947, only fully named for this year's Derby, will not go postward at Churchill Downs May 1.

Other horses listed at 20-to-1 are William Helis' Santa Anita Derby winner, Salmagundi, B. F. Whitaker's My Request, and the Belair Stud's flashy Whirling Fox.

Those interested in hefty payment may take a flier on the following 400-to-1 shorts: Alacrity, All Or Nothing, Best Hand, Big Stage, Eagle Look, Equibit, Execution, Knight's Hill, Monstro, and Seminar.

Mill Workers End Walkout

CINCINNATI, March 23—Approximately 120 AFL milling workers returned to work today at the Ubiko Milling Machine Co., in Cincinnati's suburban St. Bernard, ending a strike which began 15 days ago over the firing of an employee.

No basis for a settlement of the dispute was announced, but it was understood the firm had rehired James Collins, whom the company had charged with repeated absences.

The union claimed the concern had violated its contract inasmuch as the agreement states a worker must be absent on three successive days before he can be discharged for failing to appear on the job.

There are probably very few animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world as the earthworm. Ten tons of soil passes through the body of each every year.

Baylor Bears Get Big Chance In NCAA Meet

NEW YORK, March 23—The Baylor Bears, termed one of the "most unpublicized teams of the season," will get a chance to show their real worth at Madison Square Garden tonight when they tackle powerful Kentucky for the tenth annual NCAA basketball crown.

Kentucky, eastern regional survivor, is a 9 1/2 point favorite over Baylor, the Southwest Conference champion and winner of the NCAA western regional at Kansas City.

That both teams rank among the nation's best is indicated by the fact that they have been picked to compete in the Olympic playoffs which start in the Garden Saturday night.

Being the underdog tonight will not worry the Bears, who were cast in the same role when they upset the University of Washington in the opening round of the western regionals.

They again were shorted when they upset Kansas State in the finals last Saturday night.

22 Horses Given 200-1 Odds In Kentucky Derby

CHICAGO, March 23—Twenty-two horses are at 200-to-1, 10 at 400-to-1, and one—F. J. Marvin's brown colt Dan Chan—at 500-to-1—in the latest midwest Kentucky Derby book line on the 1948 Kentucky Derby.

Since odds makers generally hang together like stapled second sheets, it is safe to suppose that the new line is about the same from coast to coast.

Citation, the tremendous Calumet Farm runner, remains at an utterly unattractive 8-to-5 for win, and the bay Bull Lea-Hyproplane colt is odds on if you like him for second, third or fourth. The latest prices there are 4-to-5, 2-to-5 and 1-to-5, respectively.

Three of Citation's stablemates—in all, six Calumet Farm three-year-olds were nominated for the 74th Kentucky Derby May 1—are favorites too.

Coaltown, another Bull Lea colt which has shown to good advantage, is second only to Citation in the future book. Coaltown is 8-to-1; there follows the King Ranch's Better Self, which is 15-to-1, and two other Calumet steeds, Free America and Bewitch, both at 20-to-1.

THERE ARE FEW takers on Bewitch, however, since many wise men say the leading juvenile money winner of 1947, only fully named for this year's Derby, will not go postward at Churchill Downs May 1.

Other horses listed at 20-to-1 are William Helis' Santa Anita Derby winner, Salmagundi, B. F. Whitaker's My Request, and the Belair Stud's flashy Whirling Fox.

Those interested in hefty payment may take a flier on the following 400-to-1 shorts: Alacritty, All Or Nothing, Best Hand, Big Stage, Eagle Look, Equibit, Execution, Knight's Hill, Monstro, and Seminar.

Mill Workers End Walkout

CINCINNATI, March 23—Approximately 120 AFL milling workers returned to work today at the Ubiko Milling Machine Co., in Cincinnati's suburban St. Bernard, ending a strike which began 15 days ago over the firing of an employee.

No basis for a settlement of the dispute was announced, but it was understood the firm had rehired James Collins, whom the company had charged with repeated absences.

The union claimed the concern had violated its contract inasmuch as the agreement states a worker must be absent from three successive days before he can be discharged for failing to appear on the job.

There are probably very few animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world as the earthworm. Ten tons of soil passes through the body of each every year.

Baylor Bears Get Big Chance In NCAA Meet

NEW YORK, March 23—The Baylor Bears, termed one of the "most unpublishable teams of the season," will get a chance to show their real worth at Madison Square Garden tonight when they tackle powerful Kentucky for the tenth annual NCAA basketball crown.

Kentucky, eastern regional's survivor, is a 9 1/2 point favorite over Baylor, the Southwest Conference champion and winner of the NCAA western regional at Kansas City.

That both teams rank among the nation's best is indicated by the fact that they have been picked to compete in the Olympic playoffs which start in the Garden Saturday night.

Being the underdog tonight will not worry the Bears, who were cast in the same role when they upset the University of Washington in the opening round of the western regionals.

They again were shortenders when they upset Kansas State in the finals last Saturday night.

Max Schmeling's Return To U.S. Questioned By UnAmerican Chief

WASHINGTON, March 23—The chairman of the House Un-American activities subcommittee on Fascism, questioned immigration authorities today as to whether Former Heavyweight Champion Max Schmeling should be allowed to come to the United States for a comeback attempt.

Rep. McDowell (R) Pa., disclosed he is writing to Immigration Commissioner Watson B. Miller and the visa division of the State department to determine if the German fighter can be considered a "welcome guest" in this country.

McDowell remarked that Schmeling was a Nazi paratrooper who fought against the Allies in Crete and pointed out that the German fighter is now 43. He commented:

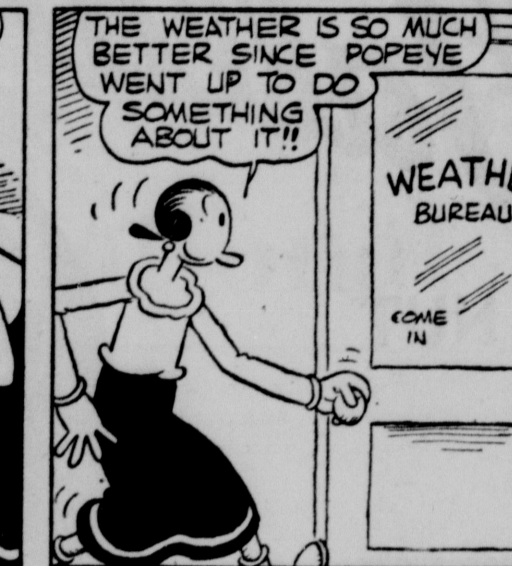

"It seems to me a rather shoddy trick on the sports followers in the United States to bring an over-aged fighter who was highly

County Unemployment Claims Beginning To Taper Off

Fair Weather Bringing More Jobs

February Peak Month, Report

Unemployment claims in Pickaway County have begun to recede after reaching a high mark of 1,412 in February caused by seasonal layoffs, the gas shortage and extreme weather.

C. C. Thomas, local manager of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation said claims are falling off because of improved weather which permits contractors to start new jobs. Some seasonal workers also are being called back to jobs.

Almost twice as many new claims were filed in January as in February, Thomas pointed out. During the year's first month, 130 new claims were recorded compared to the 70 new ones in February.

Of the 130 petitioners who filed in January, 21 of them were veterans asking for readjustment allowances. Eighteen veterans were among the 70 new applicants in February.

A breakdown on the 1,244 total claims filed in January shows 580 were for unemployment compensation, 646 for service-men's readjustment allowance and 18 were self-employed servicemen.

OF THE TOTAL 1,412 petitioners in February, Thomas said 640 were for unemployment compensation, 750 service-men's readjustment allowances and 22 were self-employed servicemen.

A sharp decrease in job opportunities for older workers was indicated by age limitations placed on more than one-third of the jobs listed in the BUC's state-wide inventory of job openings, Thomas revealed.

The inventory, which is issued every two weeks, is designed to promote the transfer of workers from labor surplus to shortage areas. It customarily carries only those jobs which BUC offices throughout the state have found it difficult to fill. The most recent inventory listed a record high of 2,200 job openings.

About 750 of the 2,200 jobs listed were available only to those within a specified age bracket. Forty-five was the top age limit for 364 of the jobs listed—better than one-sixth of the total.

The age ceiling for 172 of the jobs was 55 and that for 118 jobs was 50. Only 46 jobs were open to persons up to 60 years of age. Youth was particularly emphasized in an order calling for a chemical engineer between 20 and 26 years of age.

The BUC's Akron office is holding this order. Orders held by the Cincinnati and Youngstown offices respectively call for a pharmacologist and farmhand with the age ceiling, in both cases, being 30.

THE INVENTORY also showed a striking decline in the demand for women workers, particularly in the industrial field. Among the openings listed for women—and there were only 45—were those for an egg candier, nurses, medical technicians and stenographers.

High-paying openings included those for a textile foreman in Painesville, a mechanical engineer in Galion and a sales manager in Akron. The Akron job pays up to $10,000 a year.

Newest Potato Resists Blight, Has Big Yields

WASHINGTON, March 23—The Agriculture department has announced that 15 years of research have developed a new potato highly resistant to late blight, a disease which has long plagued producers in this country and abroad.

The new variety, called the Kennebec, was developed by crossing the best of American commercial strains with seedlings which grew from true potato seed (not tubers sent from a German agricultural experiment station in 1932).

The research program was planned and conducted by Dr. J. F. Stevenson of the Agriculture department's Beltsville, Md., plant industry station cooperating with the Maine agricultural experiment station.

In tests at four locations in Maine last summer, the Kennebec averaged 675 bushels to the acre and in one it produces more than 700 bushels per acre.

Agriculture officials said two or three years will be required to build up seed stocks sufficient for wide planting.

In addition to late blight, the Kennebec also resists certain virus diseases. It is a large potato with shallow eyes and fairly high dry matter content, which usually means good cooking quality.

Since mid-1939 the United States' population has increased more than 14,000,000.
